

Indiana properties listed only on the State Register

Last updated June 1, 2004.

Listings are updated quarterly.

The Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures (State Register) was created by an act of the Indiana General Assembly in 1981. The DHPA administers the State Register. All properties on the National Register are automatically listed on the State Register. However, a number of properties are listed on the State Register only. The criteria for listing properties on the State Register are virtually the same as the National Register criteria. Listing properties on the State Register protects historic places from state-funded construction projects.

Note: Several multiple property listing categories are duplicated in the National Register list. When repeated here, the individual listings are for State Register only properties within each heading.

THE FOLLOWING PROPERTIES ARE LISTED IN THE INDIANA REGISTER OF HISTORIC SITES AND STRUCTURES ONLY:
